MONTREAL, Jan. 12.-Two important grams were received here to-day watching the outcome of the revolution.

The first read as follows:

"Intimate friends of Peixoto have asked him to resign, upon account of so much unnecessary bloodshed, on condition that Mello or any of his open followers will not become Dictators pending the in-ble on board the dynamite cruiser Nictheroy continues. It was at first reported that the crew of the Nictheroy paid arrears of wages, which were said His Return as Mysterious as refused to put to sea unless they were be due to them. The correct version of the affair seems to be that the crew insists upon the payment of a considerable sum of advance money, and that they will not sail southward until this money is paid.

The most conflicting reports are in circulation as to the contemplated movements of the rebeis. It is still announced that they are preparing for an attack with their full force upon Nictheroy, and that they expect, if it is successful, to make a dettermined attack upon the city of Rio de Janeiro itself.

Several persons had been killed ashere by the stray bullets fired by the batteries on the quays and from the launches in the harbor. Numerous pools of blood were to be seen on the streets, clearly indicating much loss of life.

The Catania had much difficulty while its out in getting a supply of water, and had to leave port without any trusting to the steamer's condensers to supply a sufficiency for the voyage.

The people of itio were guarded in expressing themselves as to the result of the trouble. In the opinion of Capt, Matzen, Mello is beyond doubt the here of the hour and has the entire sympathy of the people. He has all the provisions and stores necessary to continue the fight, and without accident will be sure to come off victorious in the end of the struggle.

It also appears that the explosion on board of Admiral da Gama's flagship, the Tamandare, was more serious than at first announced. The first report of the affair said that five men had been killed by the bursting of a gun on board that vessel. Later reports say that six men were killed and eight wounded.

Sensational rumors have been circulated in regard to these two explosions, among them being the report that the

The authorities were fearful that Mello would attempt to seize the old guard ship anchored in the harbor. She was moved to a place of safety out of the reach of the Admiral's guns should he attempt to seize or destroy her.

The rumor, however, proved unfounded, among them being the report that the explosion at Fort Villegaignon was the work of an agent of President Peixoto, who managed to obtain admission to the rebel fort. Friends of the insurgents ashore, however, deny this and maintain that the disaster was the result of an accident.

More Witnesses Testify that He Could Not Have Drowned.

The Defense Promises to Prove that the Man Is Still Alive.

The trial of the suit brought in behalf of the children of John C. Austin to recase.

At this point Col. James announced that with the exception of one witness to prove that John C. Austin is alive to-day, his case was closed. He could not secure the attendance of that witness to testify that they had seen John C. Austin at Shrewsbury River, N. J., four or five days after his supposed drowning at Manhattan Beach; a month later at Lowville, Lewis County, N. Y., on the edge of the Adirondack wilderness in the vicinity of the Saranac and Marche place, again, and fourteen months later in the vicinity of the Saranac and Tupper Lake region, another part of the great North Woods.

I. These witnesses had, if they be believed, not only shown that John C. Austin the purchase of the suit of the sensations and surprise of driving the proofs offered by the insurance company. He called as the first witness Juy Ramsay, the Louisville liveryman, who was an early sensation in the trial, even the attendance of that witness before Monday or Tuesday, and asked leave to call him then.

After all of the sensations and surprises of this remarkable trial, even the announcement that proof would be offered of the whereabouts of the drowned man did not excite any surprise, and Mr. Truil began the arduous task of rebutting the proofs offered by the insurance company. He called as the first witness Juy Ramsay, the Louisville liveryman, who was an employee engaged on the case.

"Oh. yes, sir, perfectly. I know it was not Mr. Joe."

The witness said that she and her husband first heard of the suit through reading of it in a newspaper last December, and they decided that it was their duty to visit the insurance office and tell what they knew about John E. Austin's reappearance in the fiesh.

James C. Applegate, the Fitzgeralds' caller, came next to the witness-stand to corroborate the Fitzgeralds.

Applegate testified that he stood by the door of Fitzgerald's cottage on the La Marche place, when a hack drove up in the evening of Nov. 13, 1891, and two men alighted. Later he heard Fitzgerald tel his wife that these men were "Henry and Mr. Austin." He fixed the date by the fact that he began a sixmonths' contract job of teaming Nov. 15 at Atlantic Highlands, and because of that he had called to take his wife home for good.

Vice-President Baldwin, of the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association, was recalled to the stand for further questioning about the methods in vogue at that institution.

The witness said he carried on an investigation of the supposed death of John C. Austin for one year, employing the office detective, Smith, in the work. He denied any knowledge of one John Trensch as an employee engaged on the case.
